American Society of Civil Engineers. Hardback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, Federal Public Works Infrastructure R and D: A New Perspective, Civil Engineering Research Foundation Staff, This report, "Federal Public Works Infrastructure R&D: A New Perspective" (Report No. 93-EF1003), provides an analysis of the federal role in public works infrastructure research and development; it is one of a series of special studies commissioned by the U.S. Corps of Engineers under a Congressional directive. In performing this analysis, the Civil Engineering Research Foundation (CERF) contacted more than a dozen federal agencies and coordinated with the Federal Laboratory Consortium (FLC) to obtain data from 257 of the federal laboratories. The objective of the analysis was to establish baseline information regarding the federal government's role in public works infrastructure research and development (PWI R&D). What, where, and how PWI R&D is accomplished by the federal government is the focus of this analysis. After providing background information and defining "public works infrastructure," the report provides an overview of responses collected from a variety of government agencies concerning their perceived role in PWI R&D. As part of the effort to determine whether federal PWI R&D meets national public works infrastructure needs, a typical federal R&D program life-cycle is synopsized to include an explanation of the role of contributing organizations. Next, the report quantifies the federal role in public works infrastructure R&D. The components of this quantification include estimates of federal funding PWI R&D, where such R&D is accomplished, the types of R&D performed, and technical transfer mechanisms. Funding trends for the various infrastructure components are also addressed. Findings are documented in both tabular and graphic form. Finally, to place federal PWI R&D into a worldwide perspective, the report compares the United States's PWI R&D investment with other industrially advanced nations.
